The Source of the Quran

Anotherexampleofpeople’suseofthisweakstancecanbefoundinthemakkans’ explanationof t hresourceofMuhammad’smessage. They usedtosay,“The devilsbring Muhammad that Quran!”Butjustaswithevery suggestionmade, theQurangivestheanswer. Onepassage(ChapterAl-Qalam68:51-52)inparticularstates:

“...and they say, ‘Surely he is possessed,’ but it [i.e., the Quran] is not except a reminder to the worlds.”

Thus it gives an argument in reply to such a theory. In fact, there are many arguments in the Quran in reply to the suggestion that devils brought Muhammad's message. For example, in the 26th chapter God, clearly affirms:

“No evil ones have brought it [i.e., this revelation] down. It would not be fitting for them, nor would they be able. Indeed they have been removed far from hearing it.” (Quran 26:210-212)

And in another place (Surah an-Nahl 16:98) in the Quran, God instructs us:

“So when you recite the Quran seek refuge in God from Satan, the cursed.”

Now is this how Satan writes a book? He tells one, “Before you read my book, ask God to save you from me?” This is very, very tricky. Indeed, a man could write something like this, but would Satan do this? Many people clearly illustrate that they cannot come to one conclusion on this subject. On one hand, they claim that Satan would not do such a thing and that even if he could, God would not allow him to; yet, on the other hand, they also believe that Satan is only that much less than God. In essence, they allege that the Devil can probably do whatever God can do. And as a result, when they look at the Quran, even surprised as they are at how amazing it is, they still insist, “The Devil did this!”

Praise be to God, Muslims do not have that attitude. Although Satan may have some abilities, they are along way separated from the abilities of God. And no Muslim is a Muslim unless he believes that. It is common knowledge even among non-Muslims that the Devil can easily make mistakes, and it would be expected that he would contradict himself if and when he wrote a book. For indeed, the Quran states (Surah an-Nisa 4:82):

“Do they not consider the Quran? Had it been from other than God, they would surely have found therein much discrepancy.”

Mythomania

In conjunction with the excuses that non-Muslims advance in futile attempts to justify unexplained verses in the Quran, there is another attack often rendered which seems to be a combination of the theories that Muhammad was crazy and a liar. Basically, these people propose that Muhammad was insane, and as a result of his delusion, he lied to and misled people. There is a name for this in psychology. It is referred to as mythomania. It means simply that one tells lies and then believes them. This is what the non-Muslims say Muhammad suffered from. But the problem with this proposal is that one suffering from mythomania absolutely cannot deal with any facts, and yet the whole Quran is based entirely upon facts. Everything contained in it can be researched and nd established a true. Since facts are such a problem for a mythomaniac, when a psychologist tries to treat one suffering from that condition, he continually confronts him with facts.

For example, if one is mentally ill and claims, "I am the king of England," a psychologist does not say oh him "No you aren't. You are crazy!" He just does not do that. Rather, he confronts him with facts and says, "O.K., you say you are the king of England. So tell me where the queen is today. And where is your prime minister? And where are your guards?" Now, when the man has trouble trying to deal with these questions, he tries to make excuses, saying "Uh... the queen... she has gone to her mother's. Uh... the prime minister... well he died." And eventually he is cured because he cannot deal with the facts. If the psychologist continues confronting him with enough facts, finally he faces the reality and says, "I guess I am not the king of England."

The Quran approaches everyone who reads it in very much the same way a psychologist treats his mythomania patient. There is a verse in the Quran (Surah Yunus 10:57) which states:

"O mankind, there has come to you an admonition [i.e., the Quran] from your Lord and a healing for what is in the hearts-and guidance and mercy for the believers."

At first glance, this statement appears vague, but the meaning of this verse is clear when one views it in light of the aforementioned example. Basically, one is healed of his delusions by reading the Quran. In essence, it is therapy. It literally cures deluded people by confronting them with facts. A prevalent attitude throughout the Quran is one which says, "O mankind, you say such and such about this; but what about such and such? How can you say this when you know that?" And so forth. It forces one to consider what is relevant and what matters while simultaneously healing one of the delusions that facts presented to mankind by God can easily be explained away with flimsy theories and excuses.
